Overview:

An ineffective risk management process serves no purpose and can significantly impact the financial health of any organization. This Seminar will help you to understand the requirements and key elements of an effective risk management program, including leadership support, strategic planning/direction and proactive risk mitigation strategies to build sustainable competitive advantage.

Organizations are at different levels of development in the risk management field and at various levels of implementation of the associated processes. In this seminar you will gain ideas, concepts and tools that will help you to demonstrate how your program can be enhanced to incorporate the elements of an effective risk management approach, good risk governance and deliver an embedded Enterprise Risk Management Culture. Often valuable resources are used to investigate, respond to and pay for adverse events that could have been prevented by effective risk management.

Risk mitigation starts in the HR department that is where people are selected to become part of your business and your organisational culture.

Finance department must attend, they are the keepers of the financial models and procedures - and thus own the associated risks.

Project managers and IT leaders must attend, they bring new systems and products into the organisation and they own the risks associated with these activities.

Crisis Managers and Business Continuity Managers play a very important role in containing the impact/ minimizing the losses when some Operational Risks materialize into events - they need to know how the rest of the organisation should support mitigation of these risks.

Business Managers and Sales People need to know how to mitigate risk at inception.

This program is for everyone in your organisation, welcome to
